to restart the process. I have no idea what happened to the workstation that had previously been connected to the network with port 443 forwarded. The workstation is booted into the image-based environment on a server and is connected to a VPN, which is available through my management tools. The workstation being forwarded to the internet has no connection to any VPN. Is there some way to force the port to finally be restarted? I have a 2012 R2 Server in which I have installed Windows 10. I wanted to do a non-recursive restore from server to server. I ran the wizard, but when I got to the "Choose the restore method you prefer" page, the chosen option will not work. I went through the wizard, but I could not get back to the "Choose the restore method you prefer" page. Instead, I get one step ahead of that page. It asks for an image file name from a directory on the server. I already have the image file, it's just the wizard is not allowing me to save the image. All the other options are grayed out because they can't be completed. I can't figure out how to finish the wizard. I tried following the wizard, but I did not even get to the option to choose what I want to restore. The wizard gets stuck on the next page asking for a file name and, of course, I don't have one. Can I get help with this? I have read all the information on this site, but I don't understand what's going on. I can't seem to get past this screen. I am using Windows Server 2012 R2. So I was unable to boot from USB. I looked everywhere, including here, and I am still unable to find a solution. If anyone can help, please let me know. I will give you a description of what I have done so far. I followed the directions on As soon as the "press any key to boot from usb" was complete, I pressed enter. The computer then booted into an OS that I am certain is not the OS I am running. I also can't tell for sure what OS. At the top, there was a Windows 7
