Is it possible to do this without having to manually delete my local master branch and creating a new one? A: It's pretty simple with git: git fetch origin git checkout master git merge origin/master A: You can also use git merge-base in this situation. $ git rev-list master..origin/master This gives you the SHA1 of the common ancestor of your master and origin/master. A: git branch -f origin/master Q: What is the difference between these two conditional loops? What is the difference between: 1. while (list_count > 0) { /* do something / list_count --; } 2. while (list_count > 0) { if (condition) { / do something / } else { / do something else */ } list_count --; } A: Two things I think that you can use in each example: The loop counter / iterator variable you're using The condition for the loop In the first example, you have a straightforward loop. In the second, you've built a "conditional loop". For example, you might write: { x = 10; while (x > 0) { printf("x = %d ", x); x--; } } versus: { x = 10; while (x > 0) { if (x > 0) printf("x = %d ", x); x--; } } Both of those can be rewritten to use the more conventional: while (x > 0) { printf("x = %d ", x);
