It's 14th August 1978, and Red Alarm is capturing the attention of worldwide attention. It's a big competition like never before: Who can capture the most points first? With this, a new arcade game called "Puzzle League" is coming soon. We enter into the story of Red Alarm to be selected as the challenger to face this game. With your friends, join other players from all over the world to keep the Red Alarm as a winner! About the Puzzles: There are 4 Characters in the game: Red Alarm (the Leader of the Red Alarm Team), Luv (the Leader of the Blue Team), Storm (the Leader of the Purple Team) and Reff (the Leader of the Yellow Team). Each time you play each character, you'll be able to do different puzzles. Each character has his or her own special skill: Red Alarm has an extendable wire, Storm has a shooting star that can capture the moon, Luv has an umbrella that can stop bullets, Reff can spin the planetoid, and so on. Each puzzle will give you a variety of different features to do. For example, one puzzle might ask you to jump over a ladder while avoiding landmines on the other side, while another puzzle will ask you to shoot a missile from the edge of the planetoid. Keep playing your favorite character and meet new friends as you play, and there will be more and more amazing features to puzzle you! All puzzles have a variety of ways to solve them: You can use a power-up, plan your moves, or create an opening for your other team's characters to enter. About Players: When the game starts, you can choose to play the leader of any of the teams, or just one of them. Please let your friends know which character you would like to play as early as possible. (Each character has his or her own unique character image.) When you play, all the other players' characters will start to move at the same time. Players can play with friends from across the world, and they can communicate with their teammates as they play, even during puzzles. Players can also communicate with the custom host - that is you. You can send messages to players and so on. With these features, you can meet new friends and play with the other players who enjoy the game like you. On the top of the screen, players can see the stats of their characters as well as the scores of other players

For the first time in history, you play the role of a pirate. Your ship sails the seas of a world filled with myths and legends. In many ways, you are your own liberator: you are free from the rules of society. But there are those who have more of a hold on life than others do. About The Game Like Prison Architect, The Ship Room is a game of both caution and creativity. Isolated from the modern world, your ship is your home and your crew your family. You are free to make whatever changes you want, and the game's procedurally generated world always stays fresh – even for a handful of hours. Shipwreck your ship and you’ll have to build a new one. Take out the other pirates and keep your crew alive, and you can keep your bounty. Presentation The Ship Room is a very beautiful game. You must keep your ship afloat and crewed, while trying not to end up on the wrong side of the law. The layout of your ship is divided into three decks: your first-class, hold and second-class. After sailing the seas of a randomly generated world, you have to navigate through a series of treacherous and different environments. In addition to dealing with the elements, you must try to make your crew happy, and crew morale is extremely important. If a crew member gets bored, frustrated or hungry, you will lose crew members. A Combat Sequence is presented after every port. In a Combat, one crew member is chosen at random, and their task is to shoot a cannon, use a machine gun or pick up a harpoon gun. You’ll be earning points for doing damage to the other pirates, so you’ll need to be careful with ammo. You need to be careful with your supply, too. Although food and water are automatically distributed at certain times, you can always stock extra on your ship’s hold. Control The ship room is a game of caution and creativity, and you need to be careful at every turn. With over 200 types of modifications available, you are free to change the shape of your ship and the layout of your decks – it’s a sandbox game. Are you the captain of a ship, or just a passenger on a journey to one of many distant lands? In The Ship Room, you get to define your own story. Features: A sandbox game where you are the d41b202975

Echo! The pure joy of a button-mashing puzzle adventure game is revealed here. With just a few quirks, Echo! is an engrossing puzzle experience. No Thanks, Mario! I'll just jump ahead to Season 3: The Legend of the Puzzlegomb9 ZYT! ReviewsBack to the Golden Age of Puzzle Games9 Nintendo Enthusiast9 ZYT! The puzzles in Season 2 are frustrating, but the evolution of game design and implementation makes the act of solving them both more engaging and fulfilling. It's a smart way to perfect the art of the puzzle-platformer and expand the toolkit that any developer could use. We Will Play: A 'Spelunky' Novel8 The Internet Slaves7 Reactions to the Wi-Fi Connection7 Nintendo EnthusiastI can't help but think about how I could relate to Randy Moss as a teenager. I'd envision myself as the combination of a geek, a jock, and a slacker, and I'd be just as cut up about 'Spelunky' as Moss was about football. Monkey Island 2: LeChuck's Revenge's New Playthrough8 The Internet Slaves7 Reactions to the Wi-Fi Connection7 Nintendo EnthusiastA while ago I got stuck in LeChuck's castle. I spent nearly a month trying to solve the first dungeon. It was a slog, and the whole time I kept thinking about my approach to solving the puzzles. In hindsight, I learned the value of "learning to play." I finally cracked it after watching the playthrough a couple weeks ago. Old School Run & Gun8 The Internet Slaves7 Reactions to the Wi-Fi Connection7 Nintendo EnthusiastIt doesn't matter what system you play on. Even on a system that's more than a decade old, there's a handful of games that will blow you away. Go in Peace: Your Trail of Bubbles, Princess?9 Nintendo Enthusiast9 Get Your Game on Go in Peace is a relaxing game that requires no precision, but is still challenging. If you can find a quiet room, there's no place you'd rather be than playing this game. waldos on an outrageous locomotive. Barring a couple of unfortunate last-minute things, this is probably a thing I'm going to have to finish eventually, because there's a pretty good chance that it won't be possible to get back home to see it outside of Disneyland... Yes. THAT train. Didn't really expect to make it this time, to be honest. Got it on the train on the way out, no problem, but I wasn't expecting to be this close. I would guess that this is actually fairly close to where they're typically parked now, but the fences make it pretty clear where the station and the castle are. Just passed it by before the guard blocked me on to the station. Then blocked me the whole ride back.
And here we are. It's a bit hard to get a real feel for size from these pictures, but it looks about like this. Don't remember ever getting off for this, by the way. Might have been operated the entire time, or you might have to wait for a clear two minutes from when you were last on. I'm already starting to get a little tired of it here at the beginning, because I'll be interested in how it looks if it's been running for a little bit longer... This is kind of where we get the iconic shot of the Castle which basically designed the whole ride - the entrance, and the carriages - so it's the last bit to do. One of the slogans on the station was something along the lines of "It's Home - Let's go!" I think it used to be a bit more homey, but the wallpaper was changed so it felt a bit odd if I don't remember the ride having any branding at all previously. This was the initial set of posters for the ride. Interesting that it's a big poster, when the ride was built about a year later, it was more focused on a pretty exciting encounter between two girls in a coffin and being stuck inside. Seems to be a slightly weirder if you ask me.
